FAQ:

A: The Suzuki GN125 is compatible with brake pads, brake shoes, brake discs, and brake hoses that are specifically designed for this model.

Q: How often should I replace my brake pads on my Suzuki GN125?

A: It is recommended to replace your brake pads every 12,000 to 15,000 kilometers or as soon as you notice any signs of wear and tear.

Q: What should I do if my brake lever feels spongy on my Suzuki GN125?

A: If you notice that your brake lever feels spongy or soft, it may be due to air in the brake lines. You should bleed the brakes to remove any air bubbles and ensure that the system is properly pressurized.

Q: Can I use aftermarket brake parts on my Suzuki GN125?

A: While aftermarket brake parts may be compatible with your Suzuki GN125, it is recommended to use genuine Suzuki parts to ensure optimal performance and safety.

Q: How do I know if my brake discs on my Suzuki GN125 need to be replaced?

A: You should inspect your brake discs for any signs of wear, such as deep grooves or cracks. If you notice any damage or if your brake discs have worn down to the minimum thickness, they should be replaced immediately.
